

The hope of the gospel is not something alien to us. It is what we long for, something that promises to transform and fulfil us so fully that no human heart can fully grasp it. It requires us to go deeper than the shallow waters in which we normally paddle and to entrust ourselves to the infinite ocean which is the love of God that speaks in our hearts.

You cannot be the slave of both God and of money

Just as the steward was decisive in how he used his master's possessions to gain his favourable end, so are we to be decisive in our use of possessions and which God we serve in order to gain our eternal end. Eternal life, then, is dependent upon two things: we are to be prudent and decisive in this life, and do all we can to gain eternal life; we are to constantly monitor which God it is we serve.

25th Sunday in Ordinary Time

What makes sense of it all?

"I am the salvation of the people, says the Lord"

Newsletter Sunday 22nd September 2019

Life is full of choices. There always seem to be decisions waiting to be taken; many of those already taken are not yet implemented; we never know when a crisis will bring us to a new crossroads. Among the choices we face, and underlying all of them, is a more fundamental decision about the meaning of our lives.

There is a danger that, overwhelmed by so many other calls to our attention, we might lose sight of the fundamental questions: 'What makes sense of it all?'; 'What gives my life an overall direction?' The unrelenting demands of life today can squeeze out deeper reflection. Vaclav Havel wrote to his wife: 'The tragedy of modern man is not that he knows less and less about the meaning of his own life, but that it bothers him less and less.' Not paying attention to the underlying meaning can impoverish the life of individuals and can eat away at the foundations of human society. If we don't think it important to reflect on what life means, how can we make wise decisions about the direction of our own life and that of our community?

From the point of view of Christian faith, the failure of attention to fundamentals is a failure to see the joy and wonder of life in God's world. The gospel offers a meaning for human life that, as St. John Paul put it, leads us not only to adoration of God, but to wonder and amazement at our own worth and dignity. Pope Francis begins his Evangelii Gaudium (The Joy of the Gospel) by pointing out the tragedy of losing sight of the wonder of the Good News:

'This is a very real danger for believers too. Many fall prey to it, and end up resentful, angry and listless. That is no way to live a dignified and fulfilled life; it is not God's will for us, nor is it the life in the Spirit which has its source in the heart of the risen Christ'. (EG 2)

The seriousness of the choice that faces us is not properly understood unless it is seen as being about responding to the restlessness of our own hearts and about the search for the only goal that can fulfil all our yearnings. It is about accepting the promise of fulfilment beyond human imagining. It is about learning the always reliable truth that sets us free.

In both Old and New Testament times, there have been occasions when trust in God's love was weakened and the promise was misunderstood. Some lose hope in that unshakeable love, and become disheartened; some get diverted by the pursuit of goals that could never satisfy their longings; some feel threatened and seek to defend or advance their faith by methods incompatible with Christian love.....

TWENTY-FIFTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

At every Mass we recite the Lord's prayer. The liturgy of the Church uses this prayer also each day at morning prayer and evening prayer. It is Jesus' response to the request of his disciples to teach them how to pray. In Matthew's account it contains seven petitions and in Luke's five. The Church has used Matthew's version in its liturgical celebration.

Reflection - From a very early stage the Church completed the Lord's prayer with a special formula giving glory to God. One of the most ancient of Christian documents the Didache which may go back to the First Century contains the ending: 'For yours are the power and the glory for ever.' 'The kingdom' was added by another ancient document The Apostolic Constitutions from the Fourth Century and this is the formula which is retained today in inter-Church prayer.
